FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1907.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

4,605

"Twas, indeed, a Glorious Fourth, weather and all.

If all the money that went up in smoke yesterday could have been saved for a more useful purpose!

They have stopped preaching for a "safe and sane Fourth" long enough to pick up the pieces and patch them together.

Congratulations to the Gentlemen's Driving club for the reanimation of the local race course. The reawakening was thorough.

We're looking for some light o' Day from Syracuse to lift John D. from the opprobrium of this subpoena-hunting process. Where there's a Rockefeller there's generally a Day.

At the public hearing held in this city Wednesday on the petition for a new station for the Central Vermont, the necessity for the structure was established beyond a doubt. Too small, poorly equipped, bad in sanitary arrangements, and located in a bog the present structure has done service since the road first entered Barre over thirty years ago, and to say all it was built by popular subscription at that. The Central Vermont railroad admits the charge that a new, large and well equipped station is needed. The people of Barre certainly expect it to be built soon.

DAY OF DECEPTION PASSING IN VERMONT.

The day when deception "goes" in Vermont is passing, and several incidents within a year or two have given the practice a large shove back into memory. In this statement, we refer particularly to the demand that things be open and above board. There is no better exemplification than in the passage and enforcement of the pure food law recently enacted by the state legislature. Meats, milk, maple sugar, preserves, and in fact everything which is intended for human consumption is subjected to rigid requirements as to purity. Prosecutions in various sections of the state have held up a warning signal to any and all who are disposed to practice deception on the consumer. We are so pleased with this sort of thing that we are now demanding that the same punishment of deception spread to other concerns. For instance, and in this the farmer will be directly interested, a Vermont representative of a fertilizing company has been called to account and fined for selling a fertilizer whose label was not true, stating that the product contained a certain per cent of fertilizing qualities when it actually did not, as was determined by the state laboratory. A small incident it is, but it points toward the general tendency for freedom from deception.

PROGRESS AND LABOR.

The cotton industry still occupies in England over 500,000 persons, three-fifths of whom are females. An engineer in east Java claims to have invented an implement with which two men can cut eighteen tons of sugar cane a day. Half a century ago 23.5 per cent of all males over ten years old in England were engaged in agricultural pursuits and fisheries; today the percentage of such is only 9.5. The proposed New York and Panama cable will be 2,200 miles in length. The only intermediate station will be at Baracoa, Cuba. It is proposed eventually to extend the line into South America.

GLEANINGS.

Italy has 400 princes and 4,500 dukes. Gold dredging is to be tried extensively in Siberia. It is estimated that sixty-seven of the earth's population die every minute. It is estimated that 3,000 marriages are performed daily throughout the world. The hair from the tail of a horse is the strongest single animal thread known. Several years ago Denmark began to utilize convicts for cultivating the soil. The example is to be followed in Norway, where, in consequence of emigration, there is a dearth of laborers. Early in the fifteenth century a Paris firm annually sent to other parts of Europe more than 1,000 dolls, dressed in the latest styles, to serve as models of fashion.

JINGLES AND JESTS

After His Mother.
Friend—So that is your little boy? He looks very intelligent.
Proud Mother—Just as I was at his age. My daughter, now, is more like her father.—Nos Loisirs.

"Again" or "Yet."
"And you saw Muriel?"
"Tell me, is she married?"
"Yes."
"One question more; again or yet?"
—Washington Herald.

Previously Acquainted.
"I beg your pardon, but have we not met somewhere before?" he asked, approaching the lady as she was making mysterious marks in the sand with her parasol.
She looked at him curiously for a moment and then replied, not without a certain sense of pleasure.
"Of course we have, we were engaged for a week and a half three summers ago."—Judge.

His Fear.
"She asked me to meet her by the garden wall."
"Yes, you seem apprehensive."
"Yes, I'm afraid she intends to throw me over."—Philadelphia Press.

The Simple Life.
Miss Edna May and her millionaire husband are going to live the simple life.—Daily Mirror.
I always thought myself (And always told my wife) I scorned superfluous wealth And loved the simple life; And though my better half

Still stoutly I insisted I would not share the load of care Your millionaire is bound to bear, In cabs, perhaps, and tipping chaps I might not be close-fisted. But on the whole, thought I, no soul, Of simple taste existed. For long I stood alone: All thought I was possessed Whenever I made known The creed that I professed. But now a kindred mind, I find,

Whose view is mine completely, I note with glee this devotee Appears to see the world like me; With joy I read the Spartan creed Dejected here so sweetly. The homely round that she has found I would suit me very neatly. The seats of wealth I fly Your palaces repel— In simple manner I Would much prefer to dwell. Give me a lawn where blows The rose,

And the hollyhocks are presens; A house or two where just a few Nice orchids do the winter through; A modest shoot of roses and root I fancy would be pleasant. Where I should not refuse to pot The inexpensive pheasant. My stable should not lack Some hunters—four or five— A trotter and a hack, A cob or two to drive No simple homely sort of sport.

My modest taste disparage; I love the sound of bell-voiced hound When fox is found and skims the ground. Nor do I bar the motor car When tired of coach and carriage. And I could do with just a few Within my humble garage. Then what can people see That should their laughter raise Whenever I claim to be A man of simple ways? I only ask to munch For lunch.

The homeliest kind of vital. Quite pleased am I with chick or lamb And just a dram of good dry claret. For sumptuous fare I do not care The smallest jet or little. Upon the whole was ever soul Content with such a little!—Punch

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mrs. Clarence Mackay has sent a large organ to the Nassau county jail, Mineola, N. Y., for the improvement of religious services.

Mrs. C. E. Stevenson (Kate Claxton), the actress, has bought an extensive farm at Tallman, Rockland county, N. Y., which she will improve as a country residence.

Mrs. Phebe Hearst has announced her intention of making her home permanently in California. It is some time now since Mrs. Hearst left for a prolonged stay abroad.

Miss Margaret Miller of Paterson, N. J., has been teaching in a Congregational Sunday school for sixty years and is active and enthusiastic despite her seventy-five years.

Inmates of the home of the Daughters of Jacob in New York declare that Mrs. Nicha-Shilotsky has the power of cure by touching with her magic necklace, which she has worn for eighty years.

The great-granddaughter of President John Quincy Adams, who has just been made Mrs. Robert Romans, in addition to the other activities of her girlhood has been an earnest and devoted worker in Boston charities.

Miss Modjeska for twenty-five years was a household name among the theater goers, yet now that she is writing her memoirs she says she finds it necessary to go back to her native Polish and rely upon a translator to remake her book into English.

With the death of Mrs. McKinley there is only one White House widow left. Mrs. Garfield, who is still not a very old woman and is quite vigorous. Mrs. Benjamin Harrison married President Harrison after he left the White House and so cannot be said to be a White House widow.

State Lines.

Colorado will be thirty years old on Aug. 1, and beginning this summer the date is to be marked by an annual celebration.

According to the laws of the state of New York, the property of the wife is her own, free from all claims of the husband, and can be disposed of without consulting the husband in any way.

Mountain Ranges.
The mountain ranges of Europe lie east and west and those of America north and south.

Saffron.
Saffron is composed of the central small portions only of the flowers of a species of crocus, 70,000 of which it takes to yield the material for one pound.
